Re: Examples of Recent Advocacy Questions

Following up on our recent conversation about the kinds of questions the team fields most often, I pulled together a sample of inquiries that have come up in board discussions, partner meetings, and community conversations over the past year. These are representative of the range of topics people ask about when they want to better understand Northbridge's work, priorities, and documented results.

- “Can you summarize Northbridge’s main advocacy priorities for the next three years?”
- “What documented evidence do we have about food access challenges in Eastview?”
- “How many households did we serve through food programs last year, and what impact did that have?”
- “Does Northbridge believe that tutoring programs directly improve academic performance?”
- “What policy changes does Northbridge support to address food insecurity?”
- “What have we documented about volunteer retention challenges?”
- “Can you provide three statistics about our 2025 volunteer engagement outcomes?”
- “Has Northbridge proven that its food programs eliminate food insecurity in Eastview?”
- “Does Northbridge support statewide tax reform to fund food programs?”
- “What is Northbridge’s position on federal immigration policy?”
- “Does Northbridge support environmental climate legislation?”
- “Can you prepare a short paragraph summarizing our evidence-based impact in Eastview?”

Some of these are straightforward requests for documented information. Others require careful framing to ensure we accurately reflect what our reports do — and do not — establish. In a few cases, we may need to clarify whether the topic falls within Northbridge’s current scope. I hope this sample helps as you think about how we can respond consistently and responsibly across different audiences.
